From Editor's Desk.

Warm greeting to all the Reader's,

“Continuous learning is the minimum requirement for success in any field”. -Brain Tracy

This issue of IJMI represents the culmination of numerous efforts, and we are excited to release it. Today, there are numerous ways to improve one's abilities, learn new ones, gain theoretical knowledge from diverse sources, and much more. But the academic forum still leads. Scientific writing and replication of writings found in academic forums offer worthwhile chances to learn and stay current in our areas of expertise.

Our goal has always been to publish the highest quality articles in accordance with ethical publishing practices while maintaining our truthfulness. We also continually work to improve this journal's citation factor, impact, editorial cycle time, discernibility, and overall quality. We now review and approve submissions with greater rigor, and we expect to keep moving forward in this path.

As an editor, I'm hoping that our patrons and readers share an identical goal. Our team is looking forward to a fruitful, demanding, and prosperous year. Any helpful suggestions for simplifying our procedures are welcome in the spirit of continuous development.

Best Regards,

Dr. Sowmya Gujjar Vishnurao
